DIGEST

Present law requires certain persons, defined as mandatory reporters, to report to the Dept. of Children and Family Services or to law enforcement when the person has cause to believe that a child's physical or mental health is endangered as a result of abuse or neglect.

Present law provides for a list of persons who are defined as mandatory reporters including "teaching or child care provider".

Present law requires the Dept. of Children and Family Services to provide training on the statutory requirements and responsibility of reporting child abuse and neglect including the consequences of the failure to report.

Present law requires every person graduating from any teacher preparation program in La. to have had in his curriculum instruction on the requirements of and how to report suspected child abuse cases pursuant to present law, as well as instruction on how to identify the signs and symptoms of child neglect and abuse, including sexual abuse, in order to receive his teacher certification.

Proposed law retains present law and provides that teaching or child care providers as defined by present law are required to complete an online training course provided by the Dept. of Children and Family Services between June first and Aug. thirty-first annually. Proposed law further requires a record of completion of the course by the teaching or child care provider to be provided to and retained by each entity at which the teaching or child care provider is employed, and requires the entity to retain a list of those teaching or child care providers who have not complied with the proposed law training requirements.

Effective upon signature of governor or lapse of time for gubernatorial action.
