Digest of Bill as Finally Passed by Senate

Present law requires financial institution data match (FIDM), a partnership between a child support program and the state's financial institutions to identify financial accounts belonging to delinquent obligors.

Present law authorizes a bank or any affiliate of data match to disclose certain account information of individuals to the secretary of the Department of Children and Family Services (DCFS) or his designee in the office of children and family services, child support enforcement section, for the purposes of establishing, modifying, or enforcing a child support obligation.

Present law limits such disclosures to the name, record address, social security or taxpayer ID number, and an average daily account balance for the most recent 30-day period of a noncustodial parent who maintains an account with the bank or affiliate and who owes past-due support as identified by the state by the noncustodial parent's name and social security or taxpayer ID number. Proposed law retains present law and requires the disclosure authorization of present law to be made applicable to all persons who co-own an account with the noncustodial parent.

Present law authorizes a bank or its subsidiary or affiliate of data match to disclose certain account information of individuals to the secretary of the Department of Revenue (DOR) or his designee in the office of debt recovery, hereinafter "office", within the DOR, for purposes of enforcing a final tax or non-tax assessment or judgment against the individual or entity.

Present law limits such disclosures to the name, record address, social security or taxpayer ID number, other identifying information, and an average daily account balance for the most recent 30-day period of person who is: (1) a state tax or state non-tax debtor who maintains an account or (2) a customer of the bank, subsidiary, or affiliate, who purportedly owes a final state tax or state non-tax assessment or judgment. Proposed law retains present law and requires the disclosure authorization of present law to be made applicable to all persons who co-own an account with the state tax or state non-tax debtor, or customer.

Present law requires financial institutions to disclose to DCFS the name, record address, social security or taxpayer ID number, other identifying information, and an average daily account balance for the most recent 30-day period for each calendar quarter for each noncustodial parent owing past due support and who maintains an account at the financial institution. Proposed law retains present law and authorizes financial institutions to make the disclosures of present law applicable to all persons who co-own an account with the noncustodial parent.

Present law authorizes DCFS to pay a financial institution a reasonable fee not exceeding the actual cost incurred by such financial institution for conducting the data match. Proposed law retains present law and provides for the fee to be a reasonable reimbursement fee.

Proposed law authorizes the reimbursement fee to be paid quarterly or annually at the end of the state fiscal year upon request of any financial institution.

Present law requires a financial institution or its processor to provide the DOR or office with the name, record address, social security or taxpayer ID number, any other identifying information, and an average daily account balance for the most recent 30-day period for each calendar quarter for each account owner who maintains an account at the financial institution and who the office purports is a tax or nontax debtor. Proposed law retains present law and authorizes a financial institution to provide this information for all persons who co-own an account with the purported tax or nontax debtor.

Present law requires the DOR or office to pay a participation fee to each financial institution that actually receives a data match request file. Further requires the participation fee to be paid for actual costs incurred for conducting the data match. To receive the participation fee, the financial institution must be FDIC insured. Proposed law retains present law.

Proposed law provides that at the discretion of the secretary of DOR, the department or office and DCFS may enter into an agreement to share the costs of reimbursement fees paid to financial institutions for complying with financial institution data match laws pursuant to present law. As part of any such agreement, the department shall make reimbursement out of current allocations.
