

Prior law provided that an administrative hearing conducted after a person's driver's license has been suspended shall cover certain issues including matters relating to the legal rights of the person.

New law provides that an administrative hearing conducted after a person's driver's license has been suspended shall be limited to certain issues including matters relating to the legal rights of the person.

New law provides that administrative prehearing discovery in driver's license suspension cases shall not include depositions of law enforcement witnesses.

Effective August 15, 2009.
