DIGEST

Present law provides for the transfer of juveniles accused of certain crimes to the appropriate court exercising criminal jurisdiction for prosecution.

Present law authorizes juvenile courts to conduct hearings to determine whether a child 14 years of age or older who is charged with certain crimes may be transferred to adult court for criminal prosecution.

Present law provides for automatic transfer provisions from juvenile court to adult court for a child who is 15 years of age or older for the prosecution of certain crimes once an indictment is returned or a continued custody hearing is held and probable cause is found.

Present law mandates that a 14 year old child who is transferred to adult court and who is subsequently convicted shall not be confined for such conviction beyond his 31st birthday.

Present law does not provide for parole eligibility for a child who is 15 or 16 years of age at the time of the commission of certain crimes and who is tried and convicted in adult court.

Present law defines "child" as any person under the age of 21, including an emancipated minor, who commits a delinquent act before attaining 17 years of age.

Proposed law provides that a 15 or 16 year old child who is tried and convicted of certain crimes in adult court shall become eligible for parole consideration at the age of 31.

Proposed law shall only be applied prospectively to offenses occurring on or after July 1, 2010.

Effective July 1, 2010.
