

Prior law provided that offenses committed more than 10 years prior will not be considered for purposes of determining whether a defendant has a prior DWI conviction.

Prior law provided that the 10 year period does not include time in which the offender was incarcerated.

New law retains prior law and adds that the 10 year period will not include the time in which the defendant is on parole.

Effective upon signature of the governor (June 5, 2012).
