

New law provides for exhibition of the designation "I'm a Cajun" in the color black below the person's photograph on a driver's license or identification card, upon request and payment of an additional annual fee of five dollars.

New law provides for collection of the fee by the Department of Public Safety and Corrections (DPSC) and quarterly disbursement of monies collected to the Council for the Development of French in Louisiana (CODOFIL).

New law requires CODOFIL to disburse the monies received from the fee solely to fund scholarships for its "La Fondation Louisiane for the Escadrille Louisiane" scholarship program.

New law requires the DPSC to establish rules and regulations as necessary for implementation.

Effective January 1, 2014.
