

Existing law provides that each governing authority on whose behalf citations are issued for alleged littering violations shall establish a procedure by which alleged offenders may plead guilty to the offense and pay the fine by mail. Existing law also provides that if the offender fails to pay the fine by mail in advance of adjudication and fails to appear in court, the court may impose an additional fine or penalty in an amount not to exceed the original fine or penalty for the original violation.

New law adds to existing law by authorizing courts to suspend the driver's license of the alleged offender who fails to pay by mail in advance and fails to appear in court. The driver's license shall remain suspended until the fines are paid.

Effective August 1, 2014.
