

Existing law (R.S. 33:2531) establishes a civil service system applicable to police departments in cities with a population of 7,000 to 13,000 persons (which as of the 2010 federal decennial census includes the city of Plaquemine). Existing law specifies which positions in a police department are part of the unclassified service; generally, any position which includes law enforcement responsibilities, except an elected police chief, is in the classified service.

New law provides that the position of assistant police chief in the city of Plaquemine shall be in the unclassified service.

New law provides that a person who is appointed from a classified police service position to serve as assistant chief of police shall not forfeit his seniority and shall continue to accumulate seniority during the time he holds the position of assistant chief of police.

New law further provides that if a person resigns from the position of assistant chief of police or is terminated for any reason other than malfeasance in office, he shall be eligible to return to the same position in the classified service in which he was employed immediately preceding his appointment as assistant chief. If the position has been filled or no longer exists, the department shall employ him in a comparable position.

Effective Aug. 1, 2014.
