Present law requires the attorney general to provide legal representation to a justice of the peace or constable for claims arising out of the discharge of his duties, within the scope of his office, and not resulting from an intentional wrongful act or gross negligence.

Proposed law adds deputy constables to the offices to be represented under these circumstances by the attorney general.

Present law requires justices of the peace and constables to provide a copy of any pleading they are served with to the attorney general within five days of service.

Proposed law requires that deputy constables also provide a copy of pleadings to the attorney general within five days of service.

Proposed law retains provisions allowing the attorney general to decline representation if he determines the defendant was not acting in the discharge of his duties, within the scope of his office, or if the act was intentional or grossly negligent.

Proposed law provides that if a court determines that justice of the peace, constable, or deputy constable was not acting in the discharge of his duties or within the scope of his office or intentionally acting in wrongful or grossly negligent manner, then requires that they reimburse the attorney general for expenses incurred, including court costs and reasonable attorney fees.

Present law provides the attorney general's decision to not represent a justice of the peace or constable and all information obtained in the attorney general's investigation is confidential and inadmissable as evidence and no reference to the attorney general's decision is to be made in any trial or hearing. Proposed law retains these provisions and applies them to decisions by the attorney general regarding acts by a deputy constable.
