EXPENDITURE EXPLANATION

There is no anticipated direct material effect on governmental expenditures as a result of this measure.

REVENUE EXPLANATION

The Dept. of Revenue indicates that it does not capture information on tax returns that would allow it to estimate the amount of deduction from gross income of affected firms or the state tax revenue loss from such a deduction.

According to the Public Service Commission, earlier versions of the bill may affect four firms regulated by the Commission. Two of those firms have indicated that the bill language has no effect on their tax liabilities. The current version of the bill may target the bill to even fewer firms. The bill does, though, provide a deduction from gross income, which can only work to reduce taxable income and tax liabilities for entities that have the dividend income targeted by the bill. Thus, there is a negative exposure to state tax receipts as a result of the bill.

The bill affects tax returns for tax years beginning on and after January 1, 2018. The first fiscal year likely to experience any potential effect on state revenue is FY19 at the earliest.
