EXPENDITURE EXPLANATION

The Department of Revenue indicates that the costs to modify and test tax systems to incorporate the additional adjustment to income provided by the bill would be approximately $26,000 of staff time. Levels of applications might not be very high initially, until the program/exemption becomes generally known to be available, thus some program administrative costs are likely to implement the program participation cap, but ultimately depend upon the level of program participation.

REVENUE EXPLANATION

The number of individuals and the amount of income that might participate in the program is speculative, and a reasonable estimate of income tax foregone can not be determined. Given the normal job creation and destruction of the labor market, it is possible that some individuals qualifying for the bill's tax exemption would locate in the state regardless of the tax exemption. However, the bill contains a number of provisions for qualification that would likely minimize an existing baseline of employment growth obtaining the bill's benefits (required major medical insurance, not domiciled and filing tax returns in the state for three prior years, establishing residency in the state etc.). The bill's requirements that minimize baseline revenue losses would also seem to work to hold down participation in the program in general, minimizing foregone revenue from individuals induced to locate in the state by the bill. While the bill authorizes up to 500 participants for the life of the program, the number actually participating may be materially lower than that, with only small consequent state fiscal impacts. In addition, to the extent participants are induced by the program, and do maintain domicile in the state after their exemption period, new state tax receipts in those subsequent periods would be generated.
