Existing law provides a sentence of not more than 10 years for an offender who commits the crime of hit-and-run driving when death or serious bodily injury occurs and the offender knew or should have known of the death or serious bodily injury.

New law increases the minimum time of imprisonment to two years when the driver's vehicle was directly involved in the accident.

New law requires the offender to serve two years of the sentence without benefit of parole, probation, or suspension of sentence.

Effective August 1, 2025.
