TAX/TAXATIONEG DECREASE GF RV See NotePage 1 of 1

Grants a refundable "residential energy efficiency tax credit for the qualified elderly" equal to 50% of up to $25,000 of the total aggregate cost of qualifying residential energy efficient appliances, equipment, systems, or constructions that are

Provides a refundable tax credit for purchase, construction, or installation of qualifying residential energy efficient property by qualifying elderly persons. The value of the tax credit is 50% of up to $25,000 of total aggregate qualifying costs, limited to $12,500 of tax credit per taxpayer per tax year. Qualifying property is defined and must meet Energy Star program requirements. Qualifying persons are individuals 65 years old or older with adjusted gross income eligible for ad valorem tax special assessment (household income of $65,891 for 2011).

Effective for two tax years beginning on and after January 1, 2012 and ending by December 31, 2013.

EXPENDITURE EXPLANATION

Incorporation of an additional tax credit will require staff time and effort to modify tax processing systems. Typical costs indicated by the Department of Revenue in these cases is around $20,000, depending on the complexity of the credit being added.

REVENUE EXPLANATION

A specific estimate of the potential costs of such a tax credit can not be determined with any reasonable degree of confidence. While the bill essentially reimburses taxpayers for up to $12,500 of qualifying expenditures, it restricts eligibility to elderly taxpayers (65 years old and older) with household incomes under about $66,000 (in 2011). The extent of qualifying purchases and then credit claims by these households may make is speculative.

However, some sense of the state’s revenue exposure can be gotten by realizing that only 80 claims for the maximum $12,500 would be necessary to generate $1 million of state revenue loss. If average claims were only 10% the maximum (or $1,250), it would take 800 claims to generate a $1 million state revenue reduction. There were over 171,000 resident tax returns filed for tax year 2009 from taxpayers 65 years of age or older with income below $66,000. Thus, only a very small percentage of these filers need file for this credit to generate a material amount of state tax revenue loss.
