DIGEST

Present law requires the attorney general or his designee to be the legal advisor and legal representative to the LA Gaming Control Board (LGCB), its chairman, and the office of state police relative to all gaming matters under the board's jurisdiction, and in all legal proceedings.

Present law requires the attorney general to provide criminal investigative services to the board.

Present law provides that the expenses of the attorney general for legal, investigative, and administrative costs incurred in advising and representing the LGCB, chairman, and state police be as provided by legislative appropriation in accordance with law.

Proposed law retains present law and prohibits any person employed, contracted, or otherwise engaged by the attorney general to advise or represent the state or any state agency from representing any person seeking to be engaged in or who is currently engaged in any activity licensed or regulated by the Video Draw Poker Devices Control Law

Effective August 1, 2012.
