EXPENDITURE EXPLANATION

The proposed legislation could result in a potential savings to the Department of Corrections. Proposed law expands eligibility criteria related to district courts drug diversion probation programs. These provisions would reduce the length of time offenders are sentenced to incarceration; therefore, for each offender affected by the proposed legislation in the future (assuming the offender is eligible for the drug court diversion program) the state would realize a cost savings of $17,804 or $8,902 per offender annually ($24.39 per offender, per day housed at the local level x 365 days).

To the extent that offenders are released from state facilities, the decrease is $52.51 per day, per offender or $19,167 annually.

Savings are more likely to be incurred for offenders housed at the local level due to state facilities backfilling beds in a more timely manner. Any savings may also be reduced by recidivism.

Currently, there are 11,034 offenders incarcerated for drug related crimes that are not serving time for a crime of violence and/or other crimes with an average sentence length of 10 years.

REVENUE EXPLANATION

There is no anticipated direct material effect on governmental revenues as a result of this measure.
