EXPENDITURE EXPLANATION

There is no anticipated direct material effect on governmental expenditures as a result of this measure.

REVENUE EXPLANATION

This may increase local governmental revenues by an indeterminable amount.

This bill may allow local governments to receive tax revenue from entities that may now be considered exempt from this ad valorem tax. Due to the lack of information regarding the potential number of local governments that might be affected, the potential statewide impact is indeterminable.

However, we obtained information that provides some indication of potential impact with one local government entity. A recent judicial judgment involving an out-of-state public utility company (with property in Louisiana) and West Carroll Parish ruled that the provisions of Article Section 21(A), as currently worded, did not restrict the exemption to property owned by "Louisiana" or "Louisiana political subdivisions". Therefore, West Carroll Parish was not able to assess, collect, and retain ad valorem tax on property of this public utility. In West Carroll Parish, the impact of this bill would be an increase in ad valorem tax on property of this public utility. West Carroll estimated that an annual increase in local revenue of $103,000 could result from this bill. This type of situation could exist in other local government entities, but we are unable to determine to what extent and the overall potential fiscal impact at this time.
